STOCKS WERE IRREGULARLY WEAK, GOOD BROAD TRADE DESPITE IMPROVEMENT STORIES AND OTHER RUMORS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—In the first hour there was general activity and strength in the list, with the old favorites, Union Pacific, Steel, and Reading, in the lead to the more or less general neglect of the early leaders of Thursday. Then in the second hour there was a halting movement, followed by recessions that were checked midway in the hour, followed by more strength in the noon hour. Reports and rumors of increasing business, of large equipment and rail orders coming continue in amount too large for the skeptical to believe. Even the faithful could hardly realize that such an improvement was possible in such a short time. The turn lines to the old favorites gave the market the appearance of manipulation pure and simple. It came late yesterday, after the foundation work habeen laid by the boom in Lehigh Valley, the Louisville and Nashville, and the strength in Pennsy and New York Central.

It was given cut by one of the Street gossibps that Henry C. Frick was back of the bujing of Reading, and the best strength of the morning hours was in this stock. Much of the trading was confined to Steel, Union Pacific, and Reading, the latter leading. The news of the morning was not only scarce, but also unimportant. The Interstate Commerce Court. The majority of the issues sold brought better prices, but there was a slight recession in Railway common, and Gas barely maintained itself at the closing figures of yesterday. If the slight lowering in the price of Gas shall stimulate a good business in this favorite investment stock it will be welcomed by the Exchange. There is no reason why Gas should not be just as strong as any of the utilities. It is more than holding its own and the economies have gone deep—very. Traction warrants were strong at 3%, thus disappointing the numerous predictors who expected lowe, prices, and leaving high and dry a large number of orders from 7 to 8%. Less than another week of trading remains in warrants, and there is no indication that they will not hold out to the end of the period.

When the dinner was over the publisher rose and said: "Now, gentlemen, will any of you have a drink?"

There was a chorus of declinations and then a voice of a reporter who had been in Boston newspaper work for many years, broke the silence with "if you do not mind, Mr. — 'I will have a high ball."
